• History of forest railroad Nostalgic memories along the line

After the Luodong Forest Railroad was shut down in 1979, it was handed over to the Sanshing Township Office to be developed into public roads. Now, visitors can travel along the old railroad line by car or bicycle and stop at various stations. Besides taking in the picturesque sceneries along the way, they can also reminisce about the flourishing forest railroad over its half century of existence.

Tiensongpi - Tuchang

In 1921, in order to facilitate power generation development, "Taiwan Electric Power Company" funded the construction of this railroad line.

7 Cingshuei station 1921 - 1979

Renamed as Cingshueihu Station, the local residents consist of mostly Taipower employees and lumberjacks working in the Taipingshan. When lumbering operations drew to an end in 1979 and after the power plant became fully automated in 2000, there was an exodus of local residents, and the station was abandoned.

Lanyang hydro power station Yuanshan unit

Yuanshan unit is a ROR hydroelectric power plant that uses water from the Lanyang River to generate electricity. Inaugurated in December 1970, it became fully automated in 2000, control is done remotely via the Tienpei Hydropower Plant Control Room.

8 Nioudou station 1921 - 1979

Located on the pass between Syue Mountain and the Central Mountain Range, the area is given the name of Nioudou because it resembles two bulls locking horns. A check point has been established at the station; due to the long stopping duration of the train, many vendors often gather here peddling their merchandise in bamboo baskets.

9 Jhoushuei station 1921 - 1979

Located in Jhoushuei Village, Datong Village, it was subsequently renamed "Leshui". At the time, Jhoushuei became a thriving village thanks to the station, offering facilities such as shrines, clinics and schools. In addition, lumberjacks from all over the area also congregated here, in turn diversifying the population. After the forest railroad was shut down, and the administration center was relocated and the station fell into disuse.

10 Tuchang station 1921 - 1979

Tuchang means the gathering ground of timber in Chinese, and it is the transfer post between the mountain line and the low elevation line for timber transportation. It is also the start and end station of the Luodong Forest Railroad; Chinese cypress coming down from Taipingshan are gathered here before being transported to Jhulin Station by the forest railroad.

Luodong Forest Railroad

Luodong Forest Railroad is an important historical infrastructure for forestry development in Yilan and the lives of local residents. Due to terrain considerations, the railroad is divided into the mountain line and the low elevation line. The latter is also known as "Luodong Forest Railroad".

The railroad passes through the Lanyang Plain; with a gauge of 762 mm, the cars are relatively narrower and the locomotive only offers roughly half the power of conventional locomotives, thus they are also called "half-size cars". With the popularization of public roads in recent years, coupled with damage to the bridge foundation caused by typhoons, the railroad was shut down in August 1979.

Information about the Forest Railroad

- Year of construction : Full line was inaugurated on January 27, 1924
- Length : 36.95 km
- Operation : 8 trains for transporting timber, 6 trains for sugarcanes and 2 trains for cargo and passengers during the early years.
- Station : 10 stations from Tuchang to Jhulin
- Bridge : 77 Chinese cypress bridges
- Tunnel : 7 open excavation tunnels
- Year of shut down : Full line was shut down on August 1, 1979

Jhulin - Waizaiwai

At the time, the Luodong Town Mayor Chun-ching Chen contributed significantly to facilitate the construction of this Jifu Line (meaning complimentary line in Japanese). Completed in 1924, the railroad fostered decades of prosperity in Luodong.

1 Jhulin station 1924 ~1979

Situated inside the “Luodong Forestry Culture Park”, this is the start and end station of the Luodong Forest Railroad. All historical facilities have been comprehensively preserved, including railroad, locomotive, washing facility, log pond, unloading platform and employee dormitory.

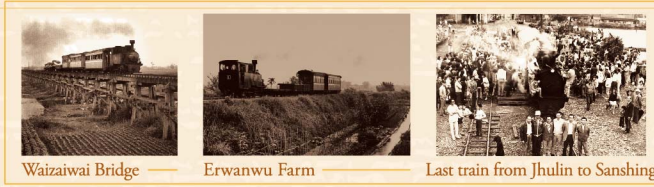

📍 Jhongcheng N. Rd., Luodong (Luodong Forestry Culture Park)

2 Waizaiwai station 1921 ~1945

As the dividing point of timber and sugarcane transportation, the station was demolished in 1945. It has been converted into farmland and the original railroad has been re-developed as the Renai Road. In the early years, the Waizaiwai Bridge was an elevated Chinese cypress bridge crossing the Luodong River. It is now reconstructed as a concrete structure.

💡 Waizaiwai means “cane” in the Kavalan language.

Waizaiwai - Tiansongpi

This railroad line was leased by the “Tainan Sugar Refinery Railroad”, thus 6 trains were allocated to transport sugarcane every day.

3 Dajhou station 1924 ~1979

Due to contract farming with the sugar refinery, Dajhou has become the hub of sugarcane plantations. Along with whistling sound of the train driving through sugarcane fields, these are common memories among the local residents.

📍 No.78, Dajhou Rd., Sanshing Township

4 Erwanwu station 1924 ~1979

Renamed as “Wanfu” Station after 1945, the station is no longer in existence, but the section house and dormitory remained intact. The name “Erwanwu” may be associated with the fact that a hectare of farmland produced 25,000 (pronounced Erwanwu in Chinese) Taiwanese catty (roughly 15,000 kg) of sugarcane at the time.

📍 Wanfu 3rd Rd., Sashing Township (Next to 196)

5 Sanshing station 1921 ~1979

Once the busiest station in Sanshing Township, residents from nearby townships and villages often took the train to Sanshing to purchase commodities and groceries. The station has been demolished and converted into Sanshing Park and Senior Citizens' Activity Center. Parts of the railroad were symbolically preserved, and the original railroad was developed into Yilan County Road 44.

📍 Yixing Rd., Sanshing Township (Sanshing Park)

6 Tiansongpi station 1921 ~1979

This is one of the well preserved stations along the forest railroad, with the railroad foundation, section house, water stop and railroad switch remaining intact. The combination of these facilities and nearby buildings has transformed Tiansongpi Station into a space rich in culture and history.
